THE HAVANA PACKETS.—The passengers in the barque Mudara, from Havana, beg to manifest their kind feelings towards Capt. Rich, of said vessel, for the very kind and gentlemanly treatment which they received at his hands during the voyage, and they cheerfully recommend him and his vessel to all travellers voyaging to or from Havana.

PROGRESS OF THE SOUTH AMERICAN REPUBLICS. PROGRESS OF THE SOUTH AMERICAN REPUBLICS.—Among the passengers arrived at this port, per barque Venezuela, are Commodore John D. Daniels, long known as one of the Commanders of Venezuelian vessels during her war of independence; Mr. John P. Adams, U.S. Consul at Laguayra, on a temporary visit to his family at Baltimore, and a number of young gentlemen from Caraccas. These last have been sent to this country in order to pursue that course of literary and scientific studies which may fit them hereafter for the aphere of life in which they are to act. Almost every packet from Venezuela brings more or less of these youths to be educated among us.

NOBLE ACTION.—While the packet ship New York, Capt. Hull, for New York, was lying in the stream opposite to Vendue Range, on Saturday last, Mrs. P. A. Scranton, of Augusta, (Ga.) one of the passengers, in the act of descending the promenade deck, fell overboard. James Booth, one of the seamen, who was in the top, at the time, perceiving the occurrence, promptly glided down by the stays to the rail, and plunged into the water after the lady. He succeeded in grasping and sustaining her in the water, until they had drifted near a quarter of a mile. In the mean time a hoat was lowered, and despatched after them, and fortunately rescued them from their perilous condition.—Charleston Courier, June 29.

Westrier Waters.—The Missouri River was rising rapidly at the last accounts. The Mississippi was still swelling at St. Louis on the 21st ult, and had commenced running into the cellars on the levee, and overflowing the banks on the Illinois side. It was raining copiously, and fears were entertained of another flood. The Illinois too was rising. The Wabash was very high.

Iowa.-We learn from the Iowa Gazette, that the bill providing for a vote on the Constitution, as it came from the hands of the Convention, passed both houses of the Territorial Legislature, on the 7th ult. by a vote of two-thirds of the members. The election is to take place in August next.

July 2—Bancreft vs. White, Adm'x.—The jury in this case, already noticed, rendered a verdict for plaintiff $\frac{5}{146}$ 20.

Charles Deceiin ads, Joseph G. Carpenter.—This was an action to recover on an alleged guarranty, for a quantity of flour, sold to a party named Fitzpatrick. It appeared that in July, 1844, Fitzpatrick received from plaintiff a quantity of flour, to the value of $159 25, with a view to open the baking business, in a store situated at Orange street. The defendant, Carpenter, having recommended him, it was contended, he became security and guaranteed the payment. The defence set up was, that Carpenter merely recommended Fitzpatrick, and did not guarantee the payment.

The Court held that the only question was, whether the flour was sold to the credit of defendant by Fitzpatrick, under credit to be given him; and whether defendant was responsible for it. Plaintiff could not then recover under the Statute for fraud. Verdict for defendant.

Catherine A. Wenman vs. Gerardus Clark and Eben H. trown.—This was an action of trespass, to recover dampes for illegal levy, under the exemption law, on a landord's warrant. The plaintiff held premises under the efendant, Clark, in East Washington Flace, and levied pon ker household furniture; under the exemption, she laims a certain amount of her furniture, value $180; and leges that the levy was excessive and contrary to retrivations under the Statute. The levy was made on the 7th of April last. The defence set up was, that defend (Clark) had a right to seize for his rent, and authoried defendant (Brown) a constable, to make the levy.

New York and Eric Rallroad,
To the Stockholders and the Creditors of the New York and Eric Railroad Company: Statements appeared in some of the morning papers of yesterday, to the following effect, viz:
That the Board of Directors had refused to pay the interest due on the 1st instant, on their bonds or certificates.

interest due on the 1st instant, on their bonds or certificates.

That the object of such refusal was to bring the affairs of the company to a crisis, and to abandon them altogether, or compel me, as president, to resign.

That I refuse to resign, and an disposed to sacrifice the concern altogether, rather than give up my position.

That the interest was withheld in consequence of a determination of the Board of Directors to do nothing more until a change should be effected in the management.

It seems proper that I should state, for the information of the stockholders and creditors, 1st, That there has been no action whatever of the Board of Directors on the subject of the payment of the interest, which was justly expected from the Treasurer on the 1st instant, and which is withheld.

2d, That the Treasurer had ample means in his hands, belonging to the company, from which to provide for the payment, which he was aware was confidently relied on.

belonging to the company, from which to provide for the payment, which he was aware was confidently relied on.

3. That he gave me no notice of his intention not to meet the payment, and that I had no intimation or suspicion of such intention on his part till near 40-clock P. M. on the 30th of June, when it was too late to convene a meeting of the Board to avert the evil. Had he given me a few days, or even one day's notice, I should have had no difficulty in providing for the accraing liability. The last intimation that I had from him upon the subject, was at a meeting of the Board some weeks since, and was to the effect that he should take care of it, and that there was no occasion of anxiety. Knowing that he had valuable assets under his control, which could be sold, or upon which advances could be obtained at pleasure; and that the financial concerns of the company were intrusted wholly to him. I neither interfered nor saw any meason for interfering with his duties in the case.

4. That upon a conference with the Treasurer yesterday, in the presence of several of the Directors, a full quorum not having appeared, though notified, I understood him to say that he assumed the entire responsibility of the course he had taken—that in his opinion the company could not go on for any great length of time with the present organization, and that he did not feel disposed to make or obtain advances on the assets in his hands.

5. It may be suitable for me to add, with reference to the other statements in the maners, that there are the

with the present organization, and that he did not feel disposed to make or obtain advances on the assets in his hands.

5. It may be suitable for me to add, with reference to the other statements in the papers, that I have not refused to resign my office as President or Director. I have not been asked to do so since the passage of the law of the 14th of May. The subject has not been officially proposed to me—no such question has been deemed open for consideration. At a meeting shortly after the passage of the law above referred to, the Board unanimously agreed upon it as their first duty, to make a harmonious, faithful and persevering effort for three months, to obtain a subscription of three millious to the stock of the company, and that without such harmonicus and faithful effort, and its proving ineffectual, no proposition of change in the organization was to be looked for from them, or any of them.

6. I am by no means disposed to sacrifice the concernal ogether, nor in any respect, but to sustain and preserve it. It was solely for this purpose that I reluctantly returned to it last autumn. All the measures which I have proposed have-been concurred in without dissent. The object of the first measures was to prevent a sale of the road, and a sacrifice thereby of all the interests of these who recalled me to this station. They doubtless expected this from me, believing as I then did, and now do, that asale of the work would not only sacrifice their interests, but extinguish all hope of a completion of the road, at also of the work would not only sacrifice their interests, but extinguish all hope of a completion of the road it is now not less evident than heretolore, that those interests, but extinguish all hope of a completion of the road it is now not less evident than heretolore, that those interests, but extinguish all hope of a completion of the road. It is now not less evident than heretolore, that those interests, but extinguish all hope of a completion of the road. It is now not less evident than here

MONEY MARKET.

Wednesday, July 2-6 P. M. The improvement noticed for the past few days in the stock market, has nearly subsided. Stonington fell off 1 per cent; Norwich and Worcester,]; Erie Railroad,]; Farmers' Loan, 1; Canton, 1; Long Island went up 1 per cent; Reading Railroad closed firm at yesterday's prices.
Prices are very feverish and unsettled, and it appears almost impossible to get up any permanent improve.

Erie Railroad in relation to the non-payment of the in terest due yesterday on the bonds of the company, and other matters connected with the concern, will be found in another column. The disposition expressed by Mr. Lord regarding the affairs of the company, does him much credit, and we trust he will submit to any personal sacrifice to ensure the completion of this important work. The feeling in the public mind in relation to his administration, is of such a nature as to prevent a fair test of the liberality of our citizens in subscribing to the stock; the prejudice, no doubt, is, in a great measure, undeserved and unjust, and it is to be deeply regretted that circumstances and the position Mr. Lord occupied in the early administration of the affairs of the company should have made him at all unpopular—but that he is so as Pre-sident of the road, cannot be denied. His usefulness can be full as effective in another capacity, and we hope he will give way and make a vacancy to be filled, for a time at least, by some one not so prominent in the histo-ry of the concern, as he has been. Judging from the tone of the communication referred to, we have no doubt he will, if officially requested, resign the Presidency.

changed very materially. The surplus revenue now is only about a million of dollars less than it was when the deposits were removed from the United States Bank, at which time the compromise act was about going into operation and the tariff becoming reduced. Movements similar to those made at that time—thirteen years since— are about to be made now, and a revolution will without doubt soon be made in the system of safe keeping and doubt soon be made in the system of safe keeping and disbursements of the government moneys. A specie system of payments of government dues will be perfected and enforced. A system requiring a strict adherence to the use of specie in the receipts and disbursements of government, would bring the currency nearer to a specie standard, and in so doing increase its value. It is the policy of the administration to bring about a thorough separation between bank and state, and the accomplishment of that object and the reduction of the tariff to a strict revenue standard, will be the principal features of the approaching session of Congress. The Secretary of the Treasury says that the tariff must be reduced to the revenue standard, and he is busily engaged in arranging the Treasury says that the tariff must be reduced to the revenue standard, and he is busily engaged in arranging the details for a reduction to that standard, and his annual report to Congress will contain the system he is now ma turing. There will be no compromise proposed, no hal way measure suggested, but at once a repeal of the present act, and no discriminations for protection in the new one. The announcement of these intentions, has aroused the ultras of both political parties, and their organs have al ready commenced a ruying their arguments in favor and of their political faith upon this measure, and make the nost nonsensical assertions imaginable, in support of, or against it. It is stated that the present prosperity of the country has been produced entirely by the operations of ery writer in favor of a high turiff, argues that high du-ties reduce prices, and parades elaborate tables, compar-ing prices current since the passage of the present tariff firm their statements. We must confess, a table of this kind, of itself, would appear almost conclusive evidence asked for a similar article imported from a foreign coun of cy. If it costs fifty cents to import a certain article he can, and command the market. The reduced vious to the tariff of 1842, have been caused entirely by the restriction which have, since 1841, been placed upon the currency, the contractions in bank loans, and in the circulation of paper money. We annex a table iving the impostant bank movements of this city, with prices for certain staple articles for the past nine years. years.

have ruled under a high tariff. The average rate of duty in 1836 was within a fraction as high as it is now, and flour and cotton were one hundred per cent higher than they are at this moment. The regulator of prices will be found in the column under the head of bank loans, and not in the per ent duty levied upon our importations. It is really astonishing what consummate ignorance is exhibited by legislators in Congress and in State Assemblies in relation to commercial systems and effects of tariff laws .-The protectionists of the North say give us liberal bank-ing systems and a high tariff, and every branch of busi ness must soon become prosperous; while their oppo-nents of the South say, give us a specie currency, and a revenue tariff, and every interest of the country must thrive and prove productive. Now the effect of liberal banking systems and an expanded currency is to raise prices sufficiently high to annul the tariff, and to admit foreign manufactures to any extent wanted; while, on the other hand, the effect of a reduction of the currency to a specie standard, would reduce the price of labor, and, therefore, prices of every thing—shut out foreign manu-factures, and send the general government into the mar-ket begging for loans to meet the current expenditures It thus appears pretty certain that in the event of either party being able to carry out all its measures touching commercial matters, the country at large would be in jured, and prosperous times temporary and seldom re alized. A medium course is the only safe one. Wo want u tariff with discriminations for protection and a sound system of banking, with a paper circulation based upon specie. When there are so many interests to legisla for as this country possesses, a conservative course will prove the most judicious, and the least likely to de,

WASHINGTON, July 1, 1845. Funeral Procession in Georgetown to the Memory of Gen. Jackson-The President and his Cabinet, and all the Line on Foot. The Executive Departments were again closed to day, in order that their officers and submight participate in the Georgetown funeral rites, to the memory of General Jackson. And the effort in hat little, old-fashioned city, to do its duty hand omely, was very creditable and clever. Shortly after ten o'clock, the process formed in the principal street and others intersect it, moved northward to Parrott's woods, march up High to West street, thence to Washington and up said street to the Grove.

The procession was headed by the Military; ther followed in succession, the Offices of the Army and

The procession was headed by the Military; then followed in succession, the Offices of the Army and Navy, the Marine Corps, the Committee of Arrangements, the Orator of the day, the President of the United States, side by side with the Georgetown Mayor, Mr. Addison, (whig.) Mr. Mason, Mr. Bancroft, Mr. Walker of the cabinet, Mr. J. Knox Walker, the President's confidential secretary, Hon. R. M. Johnson, G. W. P. Custis, Judges, Members of Congress, the Reverend Clergy, Clerks of the Departments, Masons, Odd Fellows, the Faculty and Students of Georgetown College, and of other Literary Institututions, &c., &c.

Arrived at the woods, the Orator of the day, the Reverend Mr. Custis, of Arlington, a scion of the Washington family, together with the Committee of Arrangements, the Chief Marshall, J. I. Stull, Esq., the President of the United States and his Cabinet, Col. Johnson, and half-a-dozen clergymen of different denominations, were introduced and seated on a comfortable platform, with the Marine Band. In an orchestra below, and in front, seats were prepared for the accommodation of hundreds of ladies, and they were all occupied by the beautiful creatures. The military formed a guard around them, together with the masons and odd fellows, in their gorgeous costumes; and outside of these, covering several acres of ground, were the various civic detachments, and stragglers and strangers.

When the meeting was thus organized, there was music by the Marine Band; and then, after Captain Polk had helped the Reverend Mr. Wclks, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to a glass of iced water, that popular divine led off in a solemn and appropriate prayer, at the ciose of which the Marine Band again played a funeral dirge; when, leaning on the arm of the President, the old veteran of many orations for the last forty years, Mr. Custis, delivered, impromptu, a warm, glowing, heartfelt, patristic eulogy upon the illustrious hero deceased, the late sage and soldier of the Hermitage; and then, after the benediction by Father Wicks

By the Judge Advocate.—This is the second volume of the log book of the Congress, and the signatures at tached are genuine; there was no other log book on board the ship.

The Rev. W. G. Jackson was next called by the Judge Advocate, and being duly sworn by the President, was exemined on the part of the prosecution, and testified as follows:—I was on board the Congress, on her return from the Brazil station, in the office of chaplain; ander the first specification and first charge, I know nothing; I remember seeing something in the order book in relation to the infliction of punishment which authorized or gave permission to the lieutenants to flog the men. [The Judge Advocate said, your answer to the question is "yes," then. Mr. Jackson.—"It is just as I gave it. I remember, &c." Judge Advocate.—"Well, I will put it down as you have stated it."] It was notorious on board the vessel that the lieutenants did flog; a few days before we made land, off the Cape, Captain V. observed to me, "I hope to have the pleasure of hearing you preach next Sunday at Annapolis." I replied, "You are going to Annapolis, then, are you?" He answered, "Yes, the remainder of the conversation was general, and had no reference to preparations being made for my officiating at Annapolis; I understood it as a serious and not as a casual remark; it certainly was with me, as I never jest on such subjects, pelieve there is a regular line of steamboats that ply between Norfolk and Baltimore, passing near to Annapolis. I had a week's leave, with the understanding that if the Congress was at Annapolis by the end of that time, that I was to report there or otherwise I was to go and join her at Norfolk; I left Annapolis the day after the ship arrived, and returned again to her at that place.

The examination of Rev. Mr. Jackson was here closed, and at the request of Commodore Morgan, who was in attendance as a witness on the part of the accussed, he was called and sworn by the President.

Commodore Charles Morgan then testified as follows on the pa

the Secretary of the Navy, had authorized him to do, &c.; considerable random conversation took place, and the propriety of allowing witness to give his answer was variously discussed by the different members, one of them in particular, was peculiarly emphatic. Says he, "I am reminded by this conversation of what Lord Nelson, once related to his officers, in informing them of their duty." Says the lord, very emphatically, "There are two things you must never forget, and always perform to the very letter: 1st, laste a Frenchman as you do the devil; and 2d, obey the orders of your commander." After a little further desultory chit chat, the witness was allowed to continue, as follows: Capt. V. informed me that the Secretary of the Navy had given him permission for the lieutenants of his ship to punish the men. I could have prevented it, but I chose to let the Department take the responsibility, believing that they would bear him out in it. Did any other person make a similar report to you as that of Capt. V. to wit; that the Secretary of the Navy had authorised him to allow the lieutenants to punish the men? The Judge Advocate objected to this question. The counst for the accused contended that the question ought to be admitted, as it was the only means he had of proving the authority to have proceeded from the Secretary of the Navy, as he was now dead; and that Capt. Spencer, of the Columbus, had also reported the same thing to Commodore Morgan, as had Capt. Voorhees.—The court was cleared for deliberation, and on re-assembling, the accused twas informed that the question was inadmissible. The witness then proceeded with his testimmny: I think the Congress joined me at Gibraltar, in September, 1842; I was on board of her till the middle of October: the ship was one of the finest frigates! ever saw, and in good order; her officers and crew appeared to be in as fine order and discipline as the time of their service would admit. There never was any complaint made to me of illegal or unjust punishment. When she was t merry one withal," with many a broad and hearty sugh, should you ever view his "comicalities."

Washington, July 1, 1845.

Seventh Day's Proceedings of the New Court Martial.

The court having met, and the journal of yesterday being read, Commodore Morgan was called, and he ray med his testimony for the accused. The question being proposed, "Has it been, and is it not now the practice on board American men-of-war, for the captains to show their lieutenants to punish the menfor muor of fences, or starting them with the colt, as it is called; and is not such the common usage in the mavy?" was objected to by the Judge Advocate. The court was cleared, and on the re-opening of the same, the Judge announced hat the question, in its present form, was objected to. The following substitute was then proposed: "Has it been, and is it now the usage in the navy, so far as your experience goes, for captains to authorise their lieutemants to punish the men with the colt, to the extent of dx lashes, when in the judgment of such lieutemant the case requires such punishment, without reporting the offender to the captain?" No objection being made, wit case answered: "It has been, so far as my knowledge exends, the custom, and is new to a great extent generally." Commodore Kestney here moved the court to be leared, which was done. On re-assembling again, the Judge Advocate informed the accused that the witness could proceed in his answer, which he did as follows:—"As to their not reporting the offender to the captain, I have no knowledge, as to the number of lashes I have no knowledge; as to the number of lashes I have no knowledge.

By the Court—I never ordered such punishment in the Mediterranean; I have ordered any number of lashes I have no the definition of the watch to punish for skulk ing, leaving the deck, even improperly relieved, or aleeping on watch, insolence or inertness in doing their duty in the watch. I have ordered any number of lashes I deemed proper, under two verse dans unmber of lashes I deemed proper, under t
